Administrative/Biographical History

The Tennessee Historical Commission was established in January 1919 as the Tennessee Historical Committee. It was initially created to memorialize events related to World War I. The legislature appointed State Library and Archives director John Trotwood Moore as the committee's chairman. He held that position until his death in 1921. The committee remained inactive for nearly two decades until 1940, when Governor Prentice Cooper issued an executive order for the committee to meet. Subsequent legislation over the next few years helped define the commission's responsibilities.

Today the Tennessee Historical Commission is an independent agency that is administratively attached to the state's Department of Environment and Conservation. It oversees multiple state and federal programs related to historic preservation and history. Its mission is "to protect, preserve, interpret, maintain, and administer historic places; to encourage the inclusive diverse study of Tennessee's history for the benefit of future generations; to mark important locations, persons, and events in Tennessee history; to assist in worthy publication projects; to review, comment on, and identify projects that will potentially impact historic properties; to locate, identify, record, and nominate to the National Register of Historic Places all properties which meet National Register criteria; and to implement other programs of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966 as amended."

Since 1994 the Commission's offices have been located at the Clover Bottom Mansion on Lebanon Road in Nashville, Tennessee.
