Administrative/Biographical History

The Water Resources division is a part of the Department of Environment and Conservation. It is responsible for issuing permits for municipal and industrial wastewater discharges, investigating complaints, examining fish kills and spill sites, and conducting inspections of permitted activities. Other responsibilities include monitoring the water quality of streams and lakes, protecting wetlands, and issuing permits for such activities as stream channel modifications and sand and gravel dredging. This program investigates and enforces laws regarding water quality impacts from coal mining and other surface mining activities. The division also regulates public drinking water providers and develops groundwater and wellhead protection plans for Tennessee's public water supplies. Water Resources also regulates most non-federal dams across the state and administers the Clean Water and Drinking Water State Revolving Loan Programs to provide low-interest loans to municipalities in need of updating or expanded drinking water or wastewater facilities. It also operates the Fleming Training Center to provide training for water and wastewater plant operators.
